able Material for Pavements. For the past six mouths Captain Symons has been carrying on experiments at the sand lot with the object of producing a pavement that will meet the requirements of this city. He thinks he has succeeded, and this afternoon workmen finished laying the first few squares next to the District Buildings on First street.

Buildings on First street.

It is beautiful, the blocks being a combination of Portland cement and fine sand. They are about eighteen inches in diameter and two inches thick, and are of a dark slate color, just a trifle lighter than asphait. These blocks are laid on a bed of sand and much resemble concrete. It is a well-known fact that Washington has the poorest sidewalks of any city in the Union, brick being the material most in use on account of cheapness. It makes a most unsatisfactory pavement, soon becoming rough and irregular and lasting but a few years.

Sheet asphalt has been quite extensively used of late years, but it has not proved entirely satisfactory, and the element of cost is against its general introduction. It costs $1.50 per foot and has to be laid upon a cement base, which makes it still more expensive. So brick is still used as the official pavement. It is the intention, however, of the Government to adopt Captain Symous invention if it proves a success, and Washington will be rid of poor pavements.

In a short time the whole building, sixty feet front and forty-five feet deep, was in flames. About forty-five men and women were employed in the shoe shop and about fifty in the brass foundry of Statz & Dilmier in the same building.

Many of the employes had a narrow escape. Some of the girls were bruised, and one lad, who jumped from the building, is in a critical condition. Another, James Hart, is said to be missing. The building was owned by ex-Alderman W. W. Armfield. Loss, $50,000.

Frightened, But Not Hurt. Considerable commotion was caused in the Postoffice Department to day by the falling of the elevator containing seven of eight passengers. A catastrophe was avoid ed by the safety appliances stopping the downward flight of the cage, and the badly frightened passengers were soon released. Colonel Ochlitree was the first one to get out of the elevator, and in his consequent gratitude did not perpetrate a single joke or story upon the officials he was visiting. Reports From the Isthmus. Captain Howell of the Atlanta, under late of Murch 15, from Aspinwall, informs the Navy Department there is no longer any danger of insurrection on the Isthmu at Panama. The destitute laborers are of smaller numbers than has been reported, and are quietly taking advantage of the transportation offered by their Govern-ments. The U. S. FRESH LEASE.

THE OFFICE SEEKERS GAIN A NEW GRIP AT THE WHITE HOUSE.

An Informal Cancus Held at the Excentive Mansion to the Amusement of Bystanders Some of Those Who Called-Corporal Tanner Comes to Pay His Respects.

Office-seekers took a new lease of life to-day, and badgered and bewildered the President from the time he left his breakfast until after noon, when the arrival of members of the Cabinet put an end to the grind. Delegations were out in force, lexas, by virtue of its vast territory, sendng the largest representation, and each ing the largest representation, and each member of the party wanted to have the privilege of addressing the President.

But this would hardly do, and an informal caucus was held near Charlie Loofier and the merits of the orators in the delegation were audibly canvassed, to the amusement of a large crowd in the corridor. After spending an hour in obtaining a hearing the delegation spent a minute by the watch with the Executive officer and then filed out like a lot of school boys. As the Texans came out they were succeeded then filed out like a lot of school boys. As the Texans came out they were succeeded by a delegation from Buffalo, N. Y., headed by the mayor of that thriving settlement, but their stay was likewise short; in fact, delegations do not seem to be very popular at the White House, and after spending the morning in contriving how to obtain the President's ear the visit usually results in a request to leave the petition for consideration, a graceful bow and the interview is at an end.

tion, a graceful bow and the interview is at an end.

Among the callers to day were: Senators Spooner, Hawley, Platt, Faulkner, Dolph, Mitchell, Manderson, Sawyer, Wilson, Iowa; Plumb, Stewart, Hoar and Allison, Representatives Cox, Houk, Farquhar, Breckinridge, Dorsey, Butterworth, Perkins, Cutelieon, Atkinson, Wright, Hon. John Randolph Tucker, General James A. Ekin, Lieutenant J. H. Rogers, United States Revenue Marine; General Price, Kentucky; Hon. Roswell G. Horr, Hon. Roderick R. Butter, Mayor Philip Becker, Buffalo, N. Y.; John Palmer and Corporal Tanner, Albany, N. Y.; Sunset Cox and Mrs. Peter E. Blow, St. Louis.

Two notable army officers were among the President's callers—Judge Holt, who was the judicial representative of the Government at the trial of Mrs. Surratt, and General James A. Ekin, formerly Quartermaster-General, and during the rebellion stationed at Louisville, Ky., and Chicaco, III. Both gentlemen received a cordial greeting frem the President, and especially as it was known that they had no designs upon an office. As the veterans came out of the Cabinet room they met Corporal Tanner, hobbling along on his artificial feet to pay his respects to the President, togeiner with General John Palmer of New York and one of the trustees of the Soldiers' Home in the Empire State.

protesting against being taxed for the sewer laid in front of his property. He says that it is useless to him, as the property around is used only as a dumping ground, and that Shepherd's pond, just ground, and that Shepherd's pond, just across the street, is always filled with stagmant water, making the property unfit for a place of residence in summer. He says he would at least like to have a rebate on this amount, as the sewer will be an abandoned one, so far as it benefits him. The Assessor, in his recommendation to the Commissioners, says that the fact of the pond being located there does not effect the validity of the assessment, but appears rather to require the attention of the Hesith Officer to abate the nuisance. He concludes that he cannot suggest any remedy under existing laws.

The Commissioners have informed Mr J. D. THE MOON AND THE HAIR.

Additional Authorities Give Their Yiews on a Curious Subject. Communications are still coming in to THE CRITIC regarding the idea that hair grows best after being out in "the full of the moon." As already intimated, all communications on this curious subject will be cheerfully printed. It Makes A Difference. WASHINGTON, March 28 .- Editor Critic In answer to your inquiry of the 21st inst. whether "the growth of hair is affected by being cut in the full or "the dark" of the moon," I would say that there is a popular belief that cutting hair during certain stages of the moon does affect its growth is well founded, as my experience of forty years as a barber fully confirms. What scientific explanation there is for this I don't know any more than even many "learned men" have so far failed to give a "learned men have so far fatted to give a satisfactory explanation of the influences of the moon on the tides as well as growth of vegetable and agricultural products—the fact nevertheless exists. Of course there are many of my customers who are in no wise controlled by such influences, nor do I wise controlled by such influences, nor do! ever try to change their mind, preferring to leave them exercise their own judgment on the subject. There is a probability, too, that all human hair is not affected alike in its growth; but coming back to the main point of your is. its growth; but coming back to the main point of your inquiry my experience as well as observation justify the belief that hair cut during the increase of the moon does insure a more healthy growth and the contrary effect is likely to happen if cut during its decline. Let me also add as a matter of fact as well as business that human hair cut or trimmed at least twice a mosth will insure a more vigorous growth than all the tonic in the world. WASHINGTON, March 23 .- Editor Critic: My experience as a hair-cutter is that hair cut on the increase of the moon will grow Therefore I always recommend the cutting of hair on the increase only, if the hair has a tendency to fall out. JOSEPH H. SAUNDERS, 3234 M street.

Another View. WASHINGTON, March 25,-Editor Critics Hair will not leave the head unless the roots are dead or diseased. Both are genreally produced by fever. Unless the fever is allayed, all the moons in existence will not save it. In short, there is nothing in cutting hair on the full of the moon. L. C. Bailly, corner Eighth and D streets, and 312 Ninth street.

Another Opinion.

WASHINGTON, March 22.-Editor Critics In reply to your inquiry in reference to utting of hair in the full or on the dark of the moon as affecting the growth of the same, it is a general opinion among patrons of barbers that cutting the hair on the dark of berbers that cutting the hair on the dark of the moon retards its growth. I think there is nothing in it. My observation a a proprietor for more than forty years I that frequent cutting at any and all time promotes the growth and strengthens the hair. As regarding the hair in the fall o the year, the hair has a tendency to shed or fall out, especially after a very hot sum mer, and at that time especial care of the hair and frequent clipping is beneficial, as at that season the ends of the hair have a greater tendency to split, thereby weakenas at that season the ends of the hair have a greater tendency to split, thereby weakening the hair and causing it to fall out. I say and believe that to cut often and at any time without reference to the moon or seasons is the most conductive plan to promote the growth and strengthen the hair. Hannis House Barriera Shor, W. W. L. Scott Believes that There is No Ex-Congressman William L. Scott of Pennsylvania, who was in New York Sunday, was interviewed by a Star reporter. Among other things Mr. Scott is quoted as saying: "The climate of lower Maryland and Eastern Virginia is always conductve to health in the winter time, and Fortress Monroe has had a very successful season this year. Few people in this country know that within nine hours of New York they can reach a climate as mild and balmy as that of Marseilles, in France. By taking the railroad to Cape Charles a boat transports the cars by water to Fortress Monroe and Norfolk, where we connect with the different Southern railroad systems. Cape Charles is having a harbor that will cost from $250,000 to $300,000, and is destined to be the greatest oyster, fruit and farm.

to be the greatest oyster, fruit and farm-truck shipping point in the United States.

"The counties of Accomac and North-ampton, in Virginia, are in an almost trop-ical climate the year round. Land there is worth from $10 to $20 an acre, and it's just as fertile as any of the garden spots on Long Island that cost from $600 to $800 an acre. The advantages of the climate give the planter there six weeks' advantage over the Long Island farmer. Then this line of the Long Island farmer. Then this line of railroad contracts to put the products owhere Virginia planter into Fulton Market just as cheap, if not cheaper, and just as quick as the Long Island trucker can make his hau across the city, paying ferriage, etc. For instance, a man at any of our new points on the Peninsula picks his products in the evening, and they will be in Fulton Market very contracting a product of the contraction of the Peninsula picks his products in the evening, and they will be in Fulton Market evening, and they will be in Fulton Market the next morning at 5 o'clock.

"Take a compass and draw a circle over the lower Chesapeake, within a radius of seventy-five miles of Cape Charles, and you will find that 18,000,000 bushels of oysters are gathered there every year, while there are only about 5,000,000 taken from all the other waters of the country. You can readily see what an oyster market and packing centre Cape Charles is likely to become. About 3,000 bushels of oysters can be taken from an acre, while wheat yields on an average about twenty-five bushels. Taking all these things into consideration this new railroad down the peninsula has a far broader significance to New York and Philadelphia than most people have imagined."

will wait here for the approach of the warm weather, and many plans are now being talked of for the resumption of a short and gay season at Easter. House-hunting is engaging the attention of a large number, particularly the new Senators, who have not yet selected their residences. Senator Hearst has purchased the residence of ex-Secretary Fairchild, and before he goes West will commence the extensive changes and alterations that will be necessary to make the house an ideal one for the entertaining on the large scale that Mrs. Hearst has always dispensed here.

Senator McMillan has leased the residence of the late Wm. M. Galt on Vermont avenue. It is one of the finest locations in the city, and the interior decorations were about completed at the death of its lamented owner. Senator and Mrs. McMillan are in deep mourning for their daughter, whose infant child they have in their keeping. They have also two young sons, but their household for the present will be a very quiet one. Minister to Spain Palmer will go abroad shortly, but not until the return of his wife from a trip she is now taking South. They have packed up all their furniture and pictures, and intend storing them in New York until their return to this country. Their elegant residence, on K street, is offered for rent or sale, and no doubt will find a notable occupant during this Administration.

Dr. William Hammond will not take possession of his suburban mansion until next fall. If promises to be socially a marked place during the next few years, judging from the number of elegant hospitalities which the Doctor and his wife have offered their friends at their home on Connecticut avenue the past winter.

Chief Justice Fuller is also house-hunting in a quiet way, but is on the lookout for a permanent residence large enough for his family in the heart of the city. He has had enough of suburban life, and wants to live closer to "down town" for the rest of his days. The Matthews residence, which will probably be speedily rented, will make a desirable res

The Misses Bayard are busy getting their house in order to rent for a term of years. They will remain here, however, until warm weather and intend spending the summer in Wilmington.

It may not be a matter of much moment but it is a fact that, while Mrs. Harrison herself wears a generous-sized bustle, Mrs. McKee and Mrs. Russell Harrison are following the tide of fashion and wear little if any. Mrs. Biaine still clings to the loved possession of the same kind, while Miss Blaine, whose street dresses are stamped with all the quiet elegance of continental good style, is not hampered by either a bustle or reeds in her dress.

AN IMPORTANT MATTER. State of Things Needing Action by Congress.

A decision was filed yesterday by the Interstate Commerce Commission in the case of the Little Rock and Memphis Railroad Company against the St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern, and the East Tennessee. Virginia and Georgia Railroad Companies. It is to the effect that, while under the present English legislation, the Little Rock and Memphis Raffroad Company would undoubtedly be admitted to participate in through passenger business between points east of Memphis and points west of Little Rock at through rates, and, while it was apparently the intention of Con-Little Rock at through rates, and, while it was apparently the intention of Congress to incorporate the substance of the English law in this respect into the third section of the act to regulate commerce, nevertheless in falling to provide the necessary machinery for the formation of the through route and the apportionment or division of the through rate, Congress has left this part of the third section pertially inoperative without cooperation on the part of the carriers themselves. through misrepresentation for a grossly

The Lydecker Court-Martial Trying to Find that Out-Lieutenant Townsend Testifies.Mr. Sparrow, the Expert Sounder, Reads His Testimony Given Before the Court of Inquiry.

Ten o'clock this morning found the mem-ers of the Lydecker Court Martial assembled in their room at the War Department ready to proceed with the trial of their brother-officer. Major Davis, the judgeadvocate, began the proceedings of the Court by reading the record of the testimony taken yesterday. He stood at the lower end of the long table reading the record in a mensured one, correcting at times the inaccuracies which had crept into it through the slips of the stenographer's pen.

By his side sat Lieutenant Townsend, paying careful attention to the reading. At the table near by sat Governor Boutwell, the senior connsel for the accused, occasionally stroking his iron-gray beard and listening intently to the judge-advocate. The members of the court alternately listened to the reading, read papers and gazed into space and eyed several relays of lady visitors who came in to see a courtmartial of high degree in its full resplendency of buttons and bullion. As the reading proceeded a great many errors were discovered in the record, and considerable time was consumed in correcting them.

When the reading of the record was concluded, Colonel Comstock cross-questioned Lieutenant Townsend.

"Was any bad work discovered before charges of bad work had been filed."

"Yes: bad work in quantities had been discovered."

After the recess taken for lunch the court re-assembled. The witness then introduced was A. J. Sparrow, who was one of the expert "sounders" employed to test the roof of the tunnel and ascertain the the extent of the bad work.

In order to save time he was not examined directly at first, the Court admitting instead his testimony taken before the military court of inquiry. The Central Storage Company's Six-Stery Building Cutted and a Million and a-Half Dollars' Worth of Tea and Coffee Ruined_Firemen Over-come by the Reat.

A FIREBUG DID IT.

CHICAGO, LLL., March 26.-The Central Storage Company's huge six story and basement structure on the north bank of the river at Rush street, was discovered to te on fire about 4 o'clock this morning. The blaze originated in the engine room in the basement, and by the time the first eneine had arrived had obtained such a hold very brief space the fire had burned through the building and dock to the water's edge, the blaze finding ready food in the piles of furniture and other inflammable material with which the great building was filled.

or placed within twenty-four feet of any built of brick or other incombustible material. Mr. James' house was out on Seventh street road, but stood within six feet of a brick house.

The local authorities gave him permission to build the frame structure provided that the wall next the brick house should itself he brick. This was complied with, but Sergeant Shelling, at the suggestion of Mr. Hiddle, swore out a warrant.

The question was whether the Commissioners or Inspector Entwisle could suspend the operation of their own regulations in order to meet the circumstances of any particular case. It was decided that it would be better to ascertain just what relation the ticular case. It was decided that it would be better to ascertain just what relation the Commissioners sustained toward Mr. Entwisle in giving this permission. Assistant Building Inspector King was almost sure that the inspector had not re-ferred the matter to the Commissioners. It was decided that Mr. Entwisle could throw some light on the subject, and the matter was allowed to stand over until Saturday. Why the Garrett Party Changed the Route for Their Trip.

the blaze finding ready food in the piles of furniture and other inflammable material with which the great building was filled.

The free-bent fleyser played on the structure from the south and two dozen engines from the cast, north and two dozen engines from the cast, north and two dozen engines from the cast, north and west. The flames run down to the water's edge, untiling the schooner Wankesha. This was quickly extinguished. Soon the flames hurst from the windows of the great structure and rolled up in huge volumes, Illuminating the entire North Side. The Galena elevator, but a short distance to the west, was ablaze twice; twice did the firmen put fl out. A fourth and then a general alarm was sounded, and the entire department surromaled the furnace-like building.

The great building was soon guited. There was stored in it a million and a half dollars' worth of teas and coffees. The principal owners were Eppin. Smith & Wyman of New York; George W. Love & Co. of New York; Iyde & Southworth, Boston; E. S. Comant & Co., Boston: Siegfried & Bronderstein, San Francisco; Fitch & Howland, Chleago; C. D. Lathrop & Co., Chleago; Robert Jeffrey & Co., Chleago; Robert Jeffrey & Co., Chleago; William F. Piel & Co., Indianapolis; the Union and Virst National Banks, Chicago.

The building, worth $50,000, was owned by the Arthur Bronson estate of New York and was inspired for $40,000.

At about 4:30 the flames flew across the streets and set fire to buildings a block away. These small side blazes were stopped with difficulty as a stiff breeze had spring up. Several fremm were severome by the fierce heat on Rush street and were carried away back on the bridge, while their places were filed by others. Towering flames swept down and lieked the buildings across Kinziestreet repeatedly. Goods were removed from bouses for nearly a block away, and the streets filled with frightened people.
